A detailed oil painting of a forest scene during autumn. The composition is dominated by tall, slender tree trunks with white bark, possibly birches, which are densely packed and rise vertically. The foliage is a mix of bright yellow, golden-orange, and some hints of red, suggesting a variety of trees in peak fall color. The lighting is dramatic, with strong highlights on the upper parts of the trees and deep shadows in the lower parts, creating a sense of depth and atmosphere. The brushwork is visible, particularly in the texture of the leaves and the bark.
